Two Big Number Changes – 22nd April

April 22nd is approaching fast. On this date both new local telephone numbers and new area codes, for six geographic areas, will come into use.

- If you are making national calls to people within these Code Change Areas you will need to use the new 3 digit area code, starting 02, and the new 8 digit local number.
- If you are making local calls within a Code Change Area you must use the new 8 digit local number after 22nd April when old local numbers will no longer work.
- Remember, the changes will only affect the numbers you dial, not the cost of the call!

The changes taking place on April 22nd will affect everyone, so don't be fooled this April - make sure you're ready for them.

For further information on the changes visit our website or call Customer Services.

Barry's big night out

Barry Norman has been covering the Academy Awards for more years than he cares to remember, or indeed can. He thinks it was in the early 1980s when he first hovered outside a post-Oscars party wielding a BBC microphone.

Now, of course, he is there on Sky's behalf. 'And it is much more pleasant,' he says. 'At the BBC there was never enough money to do it properly. Sky, bless them, throw money at it. Last year they threw a huge party – it was the first time I've enjoyed the Oscars.'

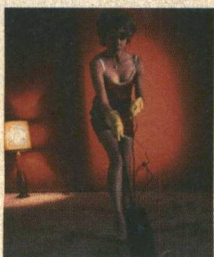

While American broadcasters almost levitate with excitement at the Oscars, Barry embodies a healthy British scepticism. After all, how seriously can an awards ceremony be taken, having overlooked Alfred Hitchcock, Charlie Chaplin and Cary Grant? And there are other, more recent injustices, also involving British-born stars. 'There is a certain amount of jingoism,' says Barry. 'I recall Tom Hanks getting a second Oscar for Forrest Gump, when it should have gone to Nigel Hawthorne for The Madness of King George. Similarly, Judi Dench should have won for Mrs Brown instead of Helen Hunt for As Good as It Gets, a grossly over-rewarded film. I think the Academy felt guilty about that, because the next year they gave the Oscar to Judi Dench for a cough and a spit in Shakespeare in Love. And in fairness, she coughed and spat beautifully.'

It is not, however, always Brits who are unfairly overlooked. Barry believes that Kevin Spacey – 'the best actor of his generation' – should have won Best Supporting Actor for LA Confidential, but that was the year Titanic swept the board. 'Just before Titanic was released,' Barry tells me, 'the rumour went round that it would be a terrible flop, which would have been disastrous for the whole industry. I think everyone was so relieved that the most expensive film ever made turned out to be a hit, they kept saying, "Here, have another Oscar!"'

And so what of this year? Barry thinks Toy Story 2 will do well in the technical categories, and predicts success for American Beauty. He rarely backs his hunches. 'But I regret not having a few quid [on] Schindler's List,' he says. 'I'd have cleaned up, because I got almost everything right. In fact I did an introduction offering my tips, and afterwards I got some disgruntled letters from people who thought I'd done the introduction afterwards!'

On Oscars night then, it seems that Barry, rather like Cary, can't win.

Land of the broadcasting giants

Tim Haines rubbishes the idea that he is, as has been frivolously suggested, The Man Who Saved The BBC. Nevertheless, the hit series he produced, Walking with Dinosaurs, could not have arrived at a better time for the beleaguered Beeb, attracting huge audiences and rave reviews. ITV did not wrest back the initiative until it played its own trump card, Who Wants to Be a Millionaire? 'Then it was Tyrannosaurus v Tarrant, and I'm afraid Tarrant won,' says Haines. It could be argued the series originated around two million years BC, and thus more than two million years BBBC. But it was in 1996 that the Corporation started looking for 'a landmark palaeontology series' and Haines, a former producer of Horizon, got on the case. Eventually, he was given the green light to spend around £1 million per episode, which he did to extraordinary effect. However, production did not always go smoothly. 'In New Zealand we ran out of dinosaur dribble, so we went to the chemist in the Maori reserve and bought up their entire stock of KY jelly. The locals probably thought we were doing some very strange stuff in the forest!' Walking with Dinosaurs, UK Horizons, from Sunday March 19th, 6.00pm Don't miss our dinosaur competition on page 107!

Heavy metal? Grrreat!

John Thomson – perhaps best known as The Fast Show's laid-back Jazz Club host – takes on another musical incarnation in The Dave Saint Show. He plays an ageing, heavy metal-loving DJ on Radio Stoke Freedom FM, who needs little prompting to recall his happy years spent bobbing along the River Trent on his pirate radio barge. 'He's a bit of a faded old git,' explains Thomson. 'One of his biggest heroes is Tommy Vance.'

Thomson is not a big fan of heavy metal. In fact The Fast Show got it right – he loves jazz, as well as folk and soul. 'I quite like Aerosmith, though, and Van Halen, or anyone who can hammer out a good guitar solo,' he tells me. But his real passion is the cinema, in fact he likes it so much he's bought his own. He has just had it installed in the basement of his London home.

'It's got six reclining seats with popcorn and drink holders,' he says proudly. 'And it's the only cinema in south-east London with Lucas THX surround sound.' What, I wonder, was the last film he screened? 'Yellow Submarine,' says Thomson who has, in fact, been known to appear on the silver screen himself – or nearly, in the case of The English Patient.

Thomson played a British soldier, who chatted up Kristin Scott Thomas in a Cairo cinema queue. 'Unfortunately my scene got cut, but I did get a handwritten letter from Anthony Minghella telling me. Some directors don't bother to let you know, so you take your parents to the premiere in New York and you've been cut. Tragic.'

The BIG PICTURE

With its blurring of the difference between films made for either television or the cinema, Sky Pictures has closed the gap between TV movies and big-screen features – and there are plenty more projects in the works ...

FIRST there was Tube Tales, in which the likes of Denise Van Outen, Ray Winstone and Kelly Macdonald appeared in a selection of short stories all of which were set on the London Underground.

Then came Milk, a domestic black comedy starring James Fleet as a dairy farmer who finds a new lease of life, and featuring a starry cast including Dawn French, Francesca Annis and Joss Ackland. And coming soon on Sky, Best, in which John Lynch headlines as George Best in a feature-length biopic of the talented but troubled football star of the Sixties.

All three have been products of Sky Pictures, the feature film production division of BSkyB which is 'committed to becoming a major force in the British Film Industry' by funding and screening new film projects like these.

Established in 1998, Sky Pictures set out to produce 12 films a year, some of which will get a cinema release before premiering on Sky. Here's a sneak preview of five features coming to a big – or small – screen near you later this year:

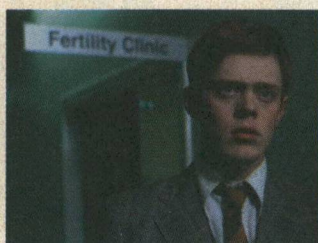

Saving Grace

Brenda Blethyn, Craig Ferguson and Martin Clunes star in this tale of a widow who turns her gardening skills to an unlikely use in order to make ends meet. The winner of the World Cinema Audience Award at the Sundance Film Festival, it will get a cinema release this spring.

When the Sky Falls

Inspired by the life of investigative journalist Veronica Guerin, who was killed in 1996, this drama features Joan Allen as reporter Sinead Hamilton, whose bid to expose Dublin's criminal underworld places her life in grave danger.

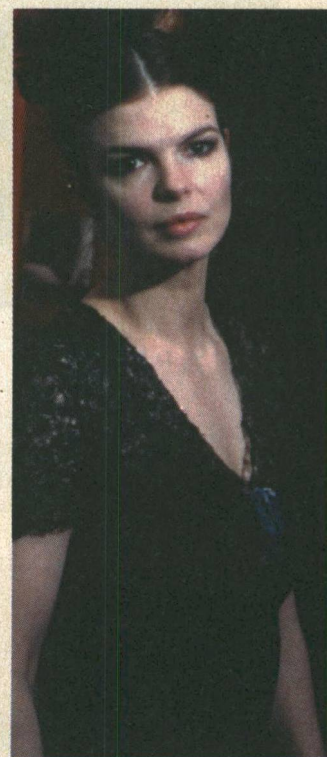

The Most Fertile Man in Ireland

Kris Marshall plays Eamonn Manley, a put-upon Belfast twentysomething, still living with his mother, who dreams of a life of adventure and romance. But then he discovers he has an unusual talent that will change his life forever ...

Breathtaking

Joanne Whalley and Lorraine Pilkington headline as two women whose relationship provides the key to unlocking their pasts – one is an ambitious doctor at a Mental Health Unit, the other a patient who has made an attempt on her life.

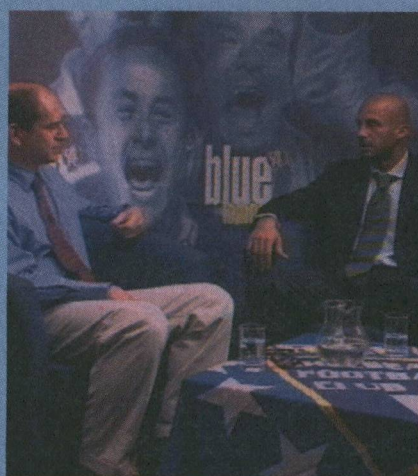

Paranoid

This psychological thriller, directed by John Duigan (The Year My Voice Broke and Flirting), follows a young fashion model as a weekend away with her new boyfriend turns into a living nightmare. A Hitchcockian thriller featuring Jeanne Tripplehorn and Iain Glen.

For Mulder and Scully, the toughest beyond The X-Files. Garth Pearce Will Hollywood abduct

The truth is out there for Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny, but they may not want to listen. The cold fact is, the odds are stacked against a bright future after The X-Files ends.

A succession of stars have struggled in movies, once the glamour of huge television and cable audiences is over. To get viewers to go out for the night and spend good money at a cinema to see an actor they've been able to watch on the small screen for years, easily, regularly and for very little, often proves too big a step.

Suave Don Johnson had the most spectacular fall of all. He had everything as Sonny Crockett, the vice cop with the Versace clothes, Porsche and shoes without socks, in the Eighties runaway hit Miami Vice.

Eight films later – failures all – and he's back on television as Nash Bridges.

David Caruso of NYPD Blue fame can't even do that. Caruso, now 44, was last seen in a loose remake of the 1947 classic, Kiss of Death, the title of which summed up his film career.

It's not always drama, either. Look at the hugely popular Shelley Long, who quit for a film career after running the bar in Cheers while raising temperatures with Ted Danson. There's not been much laughter recently. Or work either. And, at 50, it's a heck of an age to make a comeback in Hollywood.

But Anderson, at 31, will be feeling more optimistic about her future than her 39-year-old co-star. His collection of skinflicks and unremarkable appearances in Chaplin and Beethoven before hitting the big-time with The X-Files must add a touch of downbeat realism to his prospects.

Anderson, on the other hand, has had little experience other than as Dana Scully. If she can get one high profile film – she has put her name forward as Sir Anthony Hopkins' co-star in the sequel to The Silence of the Lambs, after Jodie Foster rejected the role – she could be viewed by film studios as having future box office potential. She has surprised everyone before:

winning the part of her scientific, analytical FBI agent was one example, at a point when The X-Files creator, Chris Carter, was under pressure to cast a Hollywood star, preferably big-breasted and blonde.

Anderson also proved that she has a big-screen presence, albeit as Scully, in The X-Files movie. And she has the sort of background which, quirkily, can add sway in her favour in the rounds of meetings with directors.

Her rebellious teenage past includes having a pierced nose, Mohawk haircut and a punk rocker boyfriend.

She brings up her four-year-old daughter Piper alone, following the collapse of her marriage.

Duchovny, with one good big-screen performance to his name in Kalifornia, may be hoping that he won't be overtaken by his talented actress wife, Téa Leoni. But he will also take heart over the movie success of Bruce Willis, who 12 years ago left the hit TV series Moonlighting.

He won't want to be reminded of the failed film careers of television stars Daniel J Travanti (Hill Street Blues) or David Soul (Starsky and Hutch).

case yet could be proving life exists reviews the evidence for and against Gillian and David?

The final curtain?

Patrick Holm previews
the new series of The X-Files

What does the new – and possibly final – season of The X-Files hold in store? The long-running saga enters its seventh series this month with the promise from its creator and stars that most – if not all – of the remaining questions will be answered. Gillian Anderson is contracted for a possible eighth season, but neither David Duchovny nor creator Chris Carter are tied to the show after this summer and, despite the frantic efforts of Fox Television executives to make them change their minds, it seems that the future of The X-Files – on the small screen – hangs in the balance. But on to the big question: will Mulder and Scully get together as a couple before the series finishes?

'The nature of serial television is teasing,' Duchovny says. 'You cannot have things change the way they would in real life and you cannot have the kind of resolution that you want in life.' No-one is spilling the beans, but there is a point in the episode set on the eve of the Millennium when a close encounter of the loving kind seems imminent – whether the two will become one, only time will tell.

There are more surprises. The opening episode follows on directly from the cliffhanger of last season (Sky One, Sunday 19th, 8.00pm), as Mulder realises that he may be a vital link in the chain of proof of alien life. People supposedly deceased over the past six seasons also appear in this special two-parter, while one regular character seems to take a final bow.

'There's something very special about being involved in something new and different and on the edge,' Anderson says, looking back over her time on the show. Like Duchovny, who has written or collaborated on a number of episodes over the years, Anderson is penning a tale for the 'final' series – as is William B Davis (The Cigarette Smoking Man).

'The X-Files leaves open any kind of possibility,' the shady conspirator muses – a fitting motto for the seventh year, and the whole show.

Even those tipped for huge international stardom, such as Tom Selleck (Magnum P.I.) and Ted Danson (Cheers), flopped the moment they completed their Three Men and a Baby films.

George Clooney, 38, now walking the tightrope of movie fame after ER, tells me: 'It is best to never have any illusions. You can go from the hottest thing on television to being colder than a block of ice in the time it takes to reach for the off switch.'

Message to Anderson and Duchovny: future success could be as elusive as proving there is alien life.

A mammoth undertaking

When a frozen woolly mammoth was found in Siberia, French explorer Bernard Buigues was called in to excavate, transport and preserve this astonishing discovery. Hilary Bonner reports on the tusk that lay ahead ...

HE IS 20,000 years old and still has his own teeth. The frozen woolly mammoth found in Siberia three years ago is being heralded by scientists as the most sensational prehistoric find to date. This mammoth is not just a skeleton, but an almost complete carcass with flesh, skin and hair.

Last year French explorer Bernard Buigues led an expedition, partially funded by the Discovery Channel, to excavate the creature and airlift it out of the tundra, still encased in a giant block of ice, by helicopter.

'I have been an explorer all my life but I have never encountered anything like this,' he says. 'It is the realisation of a dream. When I first started to excavate the mammoth I realised I could actually smell the beast. It was overwhelming.'

Modern scientific techniques will give an unprecedented opportunity not only to learn more than ever before about the mammoth, but also to carry out experiments from the realms of science fiction. There is even the possibility of Jurassic Park-type evolution if DNA, the genetic blueprint for cells, could be used to clone a new mammoth in laboratory conditions. Similarly, if found in sperm, this could be used to fertilise an elephant egg to create new, exotic giants.

'We will be using the most advanced techniques. The frozen remains of mammoths have been found before, although almost certainly not in as good condition as this one,' says Buigues.

The Frenchman was first alerted to the existence of the mammoth soon after it was found by members of the nomadic Dolgan tribe, who spotted a tusk poking through frozen soil. 'They were aware that they had discovered something very special and I am so grateful to them for not breaking up the tusks and selling pieces of ivory in markets, which is what has happened before,' he says. 'From the moment I was taken to the place where the mammoth had been found I knew this discovery was going to be important.'

A chip off the old block ... the frozen woolly mammoth is excavated from its icy grave and prepared for a dramatic airlift by helicopter

But the excavation of the mammoth, believed from examination of its teeth to have been 46 years old when it died, presented a daunting task.

'First a trench had to be dug around the creature using jackhammers,' explains Buigues. 'We then inserted iron beams, capable of transporting 27 metric tons, underneath the block of frozen earth encasing it. Once these supports were in place, we were able to blast away the frost beneath the mammoth. We welded the supports together to create a crude iron platform and then wrapped the whole thing in industrial cable 76mm thick and attached it to the helicopter.'

Buigues also fixed the mammoth's tusks, which had been removed, back into their original position before beginning the airlift, so observers in Siberia were able to witness the extraordinary sight of a flying block of ice, weighing 21 metric tons, with a pair of tusks protruding at one end.

'I wanted the mammoth to be complete and to leave its resting place with as much dignity as possible,' he explains. The creature was then flown 322 kilometres to the Khatanga area of Siberia to be stored in a frozen cave.

Now Buigues, understandably protective of his 20,000 year-old charge, remains secretive about its precise location. 'It's in a safe place,' is all he will say. 'The temperature where it is being stored is 51 degrees below freezing, which is perfect.'

SUNDAY 12TH
8.00PM

ER's new young doctor has pulses racing, but Martyn Palmer reveals that Goran Visnjic finds the fast life of LA a little overwhelming ...

CCORDING to actor Aidan Quinn (and he should know), his friend and former co-star Goran Visnjic can have a rather unsettling effect on women. Quinn, no slouch himself when it comes to causing a bit of an on-screen stir thanks to roles in the likes of Desperately Seeking Susan, appeared alongside Visnjic in the fantasy comedy Practical Magic, which also boasted the headlining talents of Nicole Kidman and Sandra Bullock.

And when it came to the glitzy Los Angeles premiere of the film, Bullock, Kidman, Quinn and the rest were waltzing up the red carpet faced by a hundred flash bulbs and an army of fans. But then Visnjic arrived. 'At the premiere women were saying, "Oh God, who is that?"' says Quinn. 'Women go crazy for him.'

Visnjic, at six foot four inches, with thick, dark hair and piercing blue eyes, does indeed cut a striking figure, prompting one for the

American magazine to describe him as 'freakishly handsome'.

Which is why, presumably, the makers of ER have signed him up to play the dishy Dr Luka Kovac, a Croatian survivor of the Bosnian war, and inject some much-needed sex appeal back into the world's top rated TV drama. Especially since resident heart-throb George Clooney, who played Dr Doug Ross, left to concentrate on films.

Visnjic himself is still trying to adjust to the radical change in his lifestyle that has seen him uprooted from his native Croatia and transplanted to Los Angeles, where ER is filmed. When we meet on set he's just finished his third week of filming. Visnjic seems slightly bemused by it all and a little bit overwhelmed although, he stresses, delighted at the opportunity he has been given.

'The working conditions here are great, everything is perfect on set, and the part is very good. But life in Los Angeles? I miss the centre of the town, you know?'

What Visnjic, 27, means is that Los Angeles is a gigantic sprawl and quite unlike most other cities. 'In Zagreb, Paris or London there is a centre to the city. There are restaurants, cafes and bars and when I came here and I was out looking around I said to someone, "Where is the centre?"' And he looked at me like I was crazy. But maybe you should ask my wife what she thinks of LA, because I'm working most of the time and she sees much more of it than I do.'

His wife Ivana, a sculptor, is not at hand to ask, but you get the picture – it's all a bit of a culture shock for the boy who grew up in the small town of Sibenik on the Adriatic coast and dreamed of becoming an actor.

In fact, back home he is without doubt their most famous star, a local Tom Cruise as it were. He can't walk down the streets in Zagreb without fans mobbing him, but at the moment – at least when we meet – he tells you that he can happily wander down Sunset Boulevard without anyone bothering him. That is all about to change.

'Yes, I am famous in Croatia. But nowhere else,' he says. If you press him, he admits that, of course, he has thought about what will happen when ER hits the screen.

'I know there will be good things and bad things. I know how it works. I had a little bit of experience of being famous in Croatia. Lots of people want to be movie stars but they don't realise that to be a celebrity is not that beautiful if you can't go to the store to buy toothpaste.

'But I have to just concentrate on doing the job the best way that I can and if those things happen – and I still don't notice it yet – then I suppose that's what I worked for since I was nine years old.'

He's referring to the fact that at nine he was already bitten by the acting bug. His childhood pastimes of swimming and fishing were interspersed with acting in a local theatre group and watching as many American movies as he could. At 14 he was attending drama school part-time.

On leaving school Visnjic was drafted into the army and, when war broke out in the Balkans in 1991, he stayed on for a further three months.

'When somebody is attacking your home town and you're just sitting in the basement you feel really useless. I felt I had to defend my country.'

After the military, Visnjic returned to his acting career.

His big acting break came when he joined the Croatian National Theatre. Cast as Laertes in a 1994 production of Hamlet, he got the title role when the lead fell sick and promptly won three national Best Actor awards.

He was on his way and roles in Croatian movies followed. His international breakthrough came playing the driver and translator Risto in Welcome to Sarajevo, opposite Woody Harrelson. When the film was screened at Cannes, several Hollywood big-wigs clamoured to sign him up.

Next came a small role in The Peacemaker – curiously enough, appearing alongside George Clooney (who is 'a very nice man' he says) – and Practical Magic.

His heavily accented English is improving day by day, but he still has a rather charming way of phrasing things. If, for instance, you ask him how he feels being promoted as a bit of a heart-throb, he says: 'In a film everything is pictures and images. So after a good performance a good face is a very good thing. And maybe a bad thing sometimes. I don't want to be in the clouds, if you know what I mean.'

His character in ER, Dr Luka Kovac, is a mystery man. At least at first. 'Luca is a moonlighter. He's not a regular at the hospital so he doesn't know many of the people very well. He is a little bit different, a little bit mysterious. I've done three episodes so far and I don't really have any idea of what happens to the character over the next few months.

'I have spoken to the producers. We don't want to make a wrong move. We will eventually have stories about his past but we will try to escape the politics, I think.'

The one thing that they won't 'escape' is a bit of romance involving Dr Luka. After all, he's there to set temperatures rising and, according to Aidan Quinn, he's exactly the right man for the job.

Nadia gives us fever!

Vivacious Nadia Sawalha talks to Jane Oddy about Albert Square and what soaps mean to her ...

ONCE the bubble has burst for some soap stars, they are never seen again, but leaving EastEnders was probably the best career move Nadia Sawalha ever made.

After playing nightclub boss Annie Palmer for two years she decided to call it a day and admits that it was a big step. 'But I never went into that job to feel secure,' she shrugs.

Sultry Annie was a hit with viewers and Nadia could re-visit Walford, but this seems unlikely for a while as she is wrapped up presenting the live daytime talk show Loose Women (ITV weekdays) and Soap Fever on ITV2.

Both shows seem to bring out different aspects of the bubbly actress's larger-than-life personality and she agrees that she is particularly in her element on Soap Fever, which is pitched at soap addicts. 'My favourite way to relax is to crash out on the sofa and watch soaps ... I love nothing better than poking my nose through other people's curtains and that's exactly what soaps do. I've never looked down my nose at them because I think they're a very important part of TV and some of the storylines can be really educational, particularly to young kids,' she explains.

Nadia is well-equipped to present Soap Fever as she seems to have an almost encyclopedic knowledge of characters and storylines over the years. She admits that she has 'grown into' Coronation Street, loves Brookside and is a fan of C5's Family Affairs, but EastEnders is her favourite. 'Sadly the mystery has gone out of it for me. I watch it less than I ever did but that's only because I worked there and find it hard to take anything the characters do seriously because they're my mates!'

Although she left last June, Nadia still has one major connection with Walford – her boyfriend Marc Bannerman, who plays Gianni di Marco. The couple met on the show two years ago and fell in love: 'From day one we've been like two peas in a pod and it's been a very intense relationship.'

Further down the line she doesn't rule out popping back to the soap and still hangs out with cast members. 'I'm always going to their leaving parties!' she laughs. 'But I would never go back as a full-timer – I got a bit fat and happy on EastEnders and it made me lazy. But I do like an element of danger – I was terrified when I started presenting but it felt fantastic because I could be open, sell myself and say what I really thought!'

Catherine makes her mark – at last!

Until she got noticed by Steven Spielberg on TV, Catherine Zeta-Jones's film career was sinking fast. Just three years on, however, she's the toast of Hollywood.

Interview: Garth Pearce

CATHERINE ZETA-JONES came of age as a Hollywood sex symbol during a big dance sequence with Antonio Banderas in The Mask of Zorro, when her character – high-bred Spanish beauty Elena – lets her hair down in a wild fandango.

'It was,' says Zeta-Jones, 'like having sex on the dance floor. But I could not have felt less sexy. We were on night shooting, doing take after take, and finally got it right at about four o'clock in the morning. By the time we were finished, I could not tell whether it was outrageous or not.'

The role helped earn the 30-year-old actress the best reviews of her career and finally gave her the breakthrough she so desired. It led to Sean Connery insisting that she become his co-star in last year's hit thriller Entrapment. And by the time she announced her surprise wedding plans with 55-year-old Michael Douglas on New Year's Day, most people in America knew who she was. Now she is pregnant her fame can only increase.

It could have all been so different. Desperate for movie success and concerned that a series of poor films seemed to be burying her career after her role in ITV's The Darling Buds of May established her as Britain's sweetheart, Zeta-Jones had moved to Hollywood to start all over again.

'I got an agent in Los Angeles and took the flight over,' she says. 'The first call I made on arrival was to the agent and I heard an answer phone message, saying: "I will be in Europe for the next four months." So I was on my own. I rented an apartment and then started going to loads of auditions. I was back to being a total unknown. In one way, it was exciting, in another, absolutely terrifying. If I failed, there seemed no way back.'

There was not much to build on, either, with her filmography listing disappointing movies such as Christopher Columbus: The Discovery and Splitting Heirs. 'It was not as if I had a great body of work at my disposal,' she continues. 'I was living off my savings, which were becoming depleted, and it was just a matter of survival.'

But Zeta-Jones was always hungry for success, even when, as a starstruck teenager, she travelled from her native Swansea to audition for a role in the musical 42nd Street in London. She got the job and enjoyed her first taste of fame.

'I built up a kind of bullish resistance,' she says. 'You can knock me on the floor and I will stand straight up again. There was no way I was going to lie down and disappear.' Even so, the initial signs were not encouraging. She was limited to roles in American TV mini-series, such as Catherine the Great and Titanic, at a point just before the whole world would rave about the Oscar-scooping, big-screen Titanic, starring Kate Winslet.

Interest in Zeta-Jones remained muted; she could walk unnoticed in the States and few cared about her private life or her work. But one meeting with Steven Spielberg, the world's most powerful director, changed all that.

'I thought my agent had lost his mind when he announced who wanted to see me,' she says. 'Yet I was soon on the set of The Lost World: Jurassic Park, which was like a dream sequence.'

'There am I, sitting next to Steven Spielberg, as he tells people what to do with model dinosaurs. He introduces me to Jeff Goldblum and a whole host of people. He finally tells me that he's producing this movie about Zorro and wants me for it, based on what he had seen me doing in Titanic.'

'He said: "But it's not my final decision. I want you to see the film's director, Martin Campbell, and for him to want you for the part as much as I want you." Then he said, "What is that funny accent you're using?" I told him it was Welsh and wondered, for a second, if it might be a problem.'

'But once I saw Martin, he gave me a screen test and I was given the role. It restored my faith in those kinds of Hollywood stories I had heard about over the years. Suddenly, something happens that changes your life.'

'I thought the film had a great chance of success,' she says. 'But I had been in this situation before, with a good cast and script, and they had come to nothing, so there were no real guarantees.'

She plays Elena, stolen as a baby from her wealthy father (Anthony Hopkins), a champion of the poor in Mexico in the guise of the fabled Zorro. The dastardly villain who kidnapped the young Elena murders her mother and brings her up as his own. After 20 years in jail, her father escapes to tutor a rebel (Banderas) in the art of swordplay and trains him as the new Zorro. He has also pledged to win back his daughter and avenge the death of his wife.

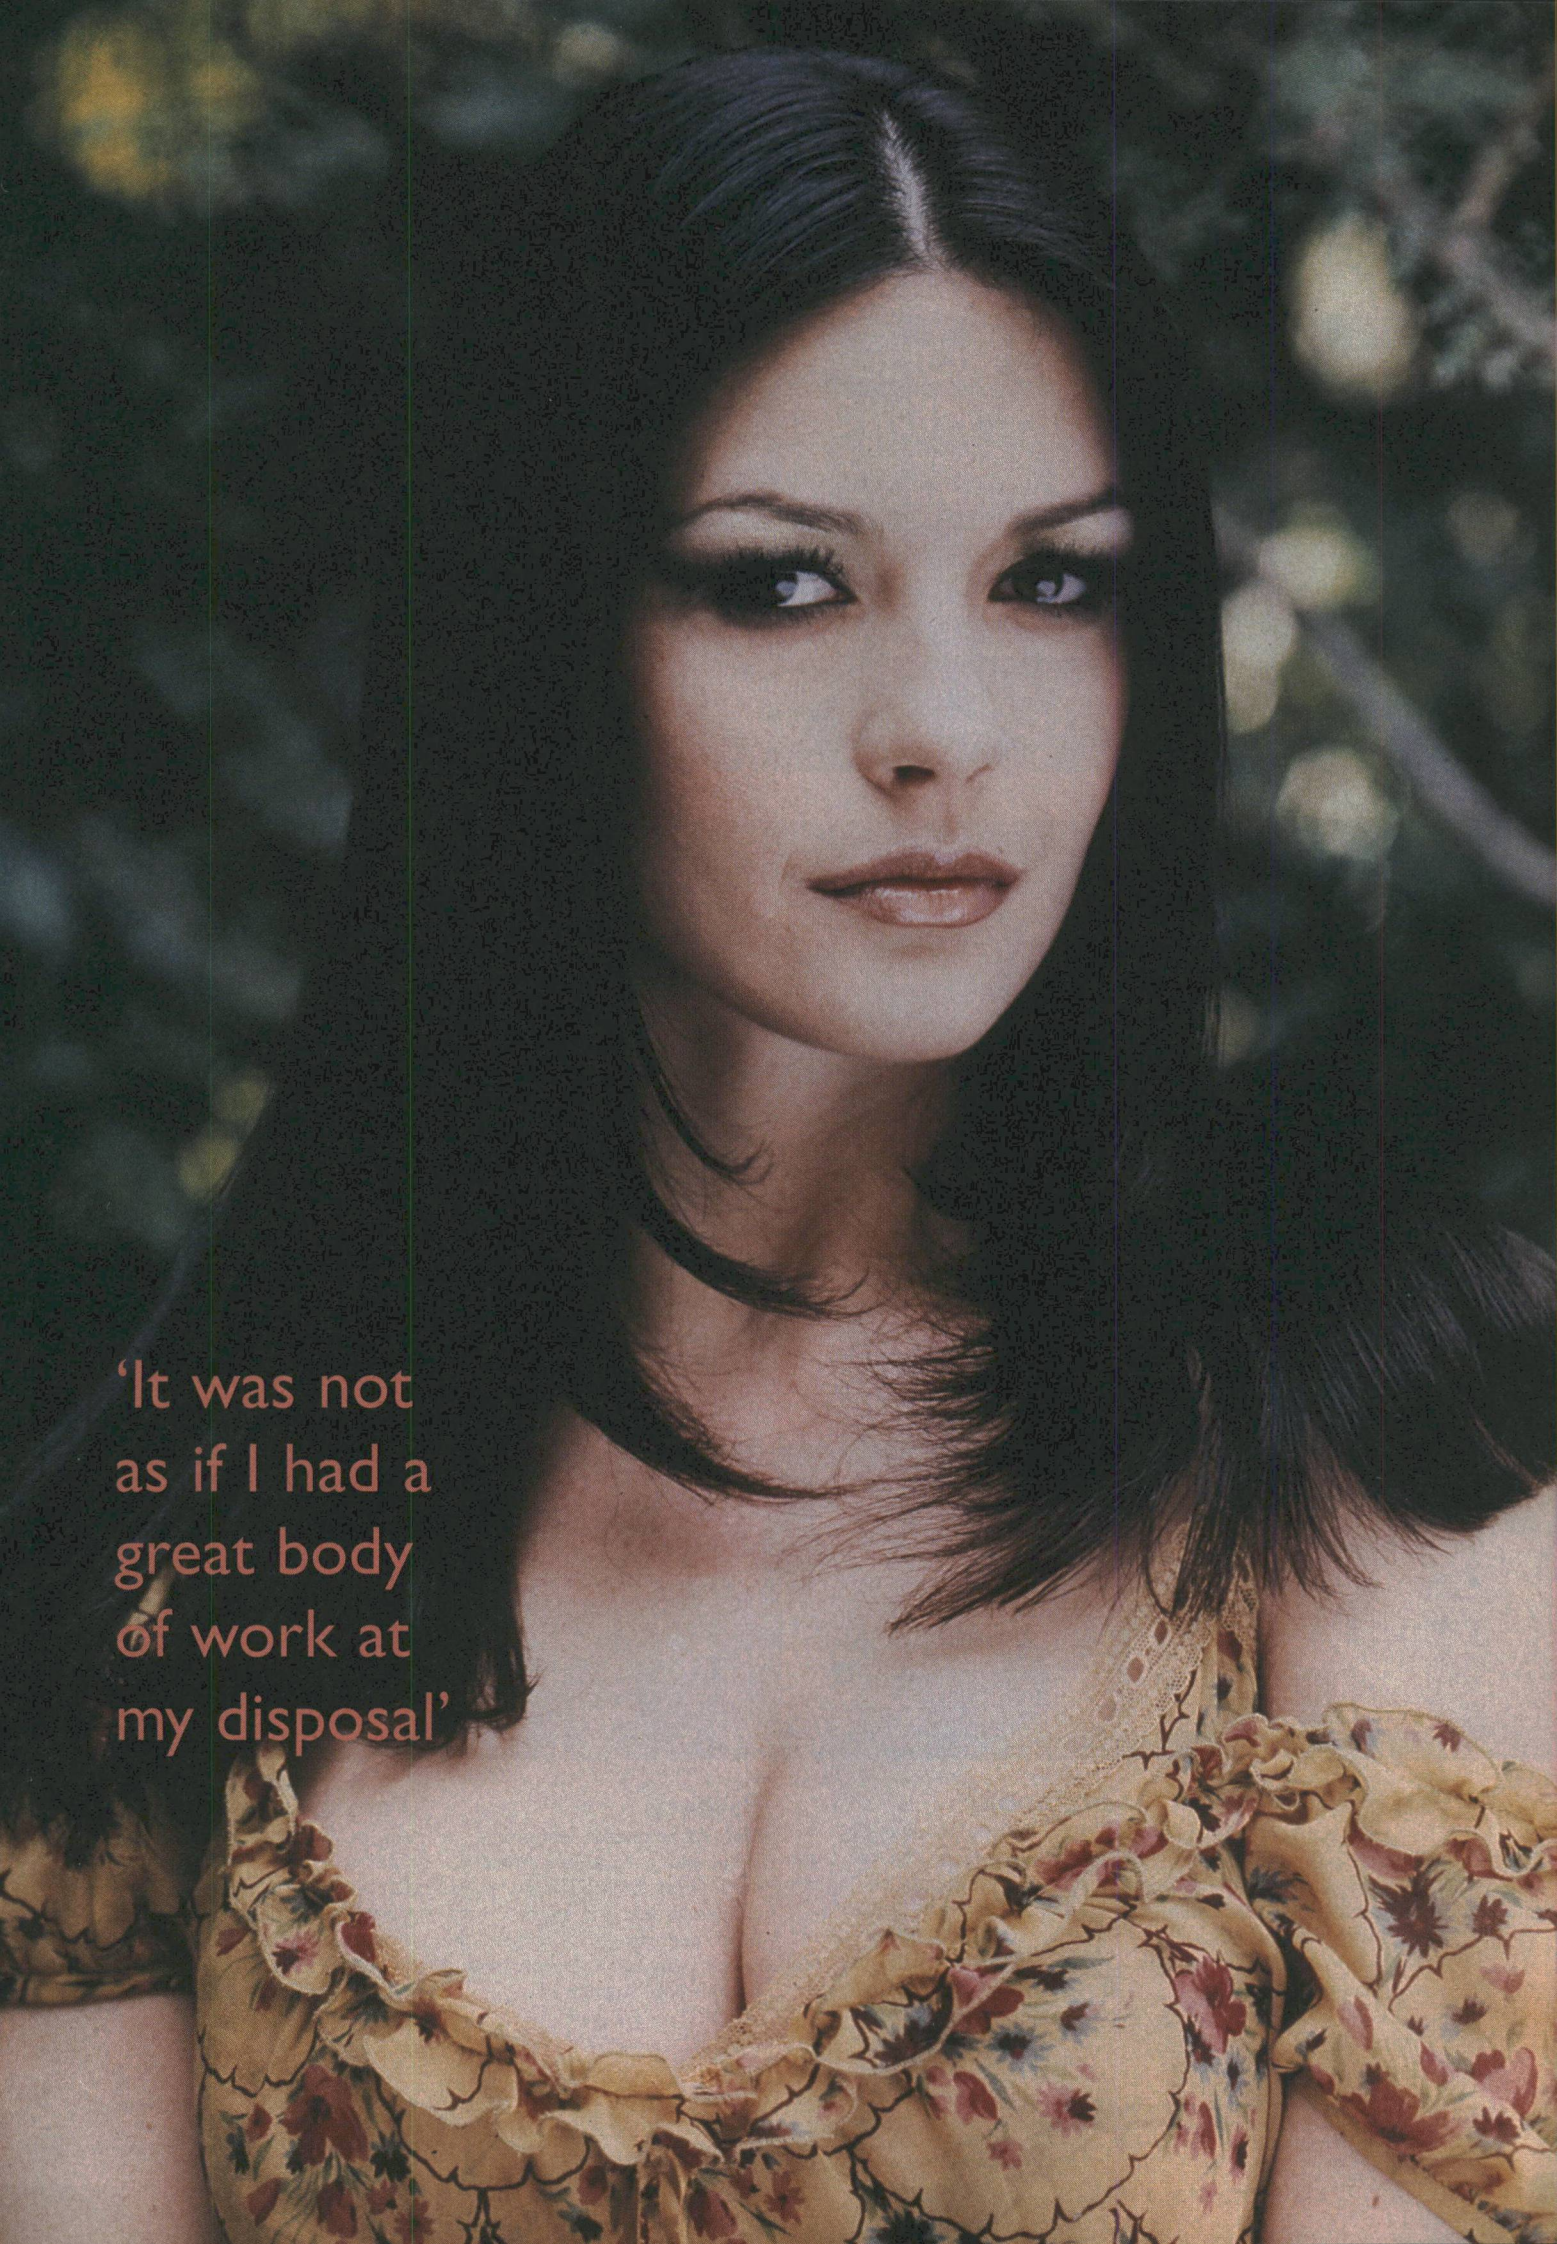

For Zeta-Jones, the search for a winner was over. 'It's a wonderful relationship to have on screen,' she says of her pairing with Banderas. 'There are only kisses with Antonio, but the dancing and sword fighting between us are almost like foreplay. It really is quite sexy. Many scenes are created in a very naughty way and there is always a hint of more to come.'

Such is Zeta-Jones's new-found power that she has formed a company, Zeta Films, which expects to produce up to six films in the next two years. 'The future,' she says, with understatement, 'looks bright. The struggle has been worth it.'

BACK in the Seventies, when his film school contemporaries (even mainstream mongers George Lucas and Brian DePalma) all wanted to make experimental movies, John Carpenter admitted his dearest wish was to be transported back to the Forties heyday of the studio system and allowed to crank out films on a production line, preferably Westerns and crime thrillers. While others hailed arthouse directors such as Jean-Luc Godard as their models, Carpenter revered straight-ahead action man Howard Hawks as the greatest film-maker of all time, and was also a keen student of the suspense mechanics of Alfred Hitchcock.

Carpenter first came to public attention when, like Lucas with his THX 1138, he made a student sci-fi film that was picked up by a Hollywood producer for release. The difference was that THX 1138 wound up being backed by Francis Ford Coppola and became a flop so enormous that Lucas vowed never to make serious films again (he has since devoted himself to making many fortunes from kiddie audiences), while Carpenter's Dark Star was acquired by Jack H. Harris, a producer best known for the 1958 version of The Blob, and was a modest hit. This set Carpenter on a road that would take him through early successes, an unhappy spell in the studio mainstream, and a series of reversals and disappointments, to his current status in career limbo.

Dark Star was a collaboration between Carpenter and writer-actor Dan O'Bannon, who went on to pen the original story of

He may have made more than his fair share of disappointing movies, but director John Carpenter's cult status is assured thanks to such low-budget gems as Dark Star and Halloween

Kim Newman on ...
JOHN CARPENTER

Ridley Scott's Alien. The Scott film is Dark Star done serious, with a crew of grouchy astronauts, who can't stand each other, caught between their own treacherous ship and a ravenous alien monster. But the strength of Dark Star is its hippie-flavoured black humour. It sees four bewhiskered, zoned-out spacemen try to cope with a malicious alien beachball with Creature from the Black Lagoon-style claws, a deep-frozen commander who wants only to talk about baseball and, worst of all, a sentient bomb which can't be dissuaded from its mission to explode even by philosophical discussion. Sold with the slogan 'Bombed out in space with a spaced-out bomb', Dark Star is a weirdly melancholy comedy, with its odd use of country and western music and a final image of an astronaut surfing into a planet's atmosphere to burn up like a falling star. Neither Carpenter nor O'Bannon, nor anyone else for that matter, has made anything quite like it since.

A calling card of a movie, Dark Star landed Carpenter a couple of assignments that established his own personality. Assault on Precinct 13 (an urban action movie modelled on Hawks's Western Rio Bravo and George Romero's seminal zombiethon Night of the Living Dead) and Halloween, a breakthrough horror movie of The Blair Witch Project proportions – they're still making sequels – are amazingly confident little films. With his own atmospheric synth scores and long-held shots, the films take basic suspense situations (a police station besieged by a strange street gang, a masked psycho stalking baby-sitters) and spin them out into delicious nightmares. From Hawks, Carpenter took a love for character brought out in extreme situations – the bonding of killer and cops in Assault, the resilience of virginal teen Jamie Lee Curtis in Halloween. And, perhaps from film-maker William Castle (who made The Tingler, House on Haunted Hill and other gimmick-filled pictures), he took the fun side of being scary, of staging hand-through-the-window shocks, tossing off a wisecrack between monster attacks and the sense that you could go home after the ride without being seriously upset – unlike, say, the audiences of Night of the Living Dead.

The shame of it is that it didn't last. Since his first three films, all perfect in their own way, Carpenter has made only one masterpiece – The Thing. Almost-good pictures like The Fog, Escape from New York, Christine, Prince of Darkness and They Live gave way to almost-bad pictures like Starman, Big Trouble in Little China, Memoirs of an Invisible Man and In the Mouth of Madness, then outright bad pictures like Escape from L.A., Village of the Damned and Vampires. Too many Carpenter films open brilliantly and then fall apart, and his plots have lacked the dynamic simplicity that make Assault and Halloween such relentless suspense machines. Christine is representative second-rank Carpenter – an ordinary Stephen King flick, with good characters and effects (a self-repairing classic car) which plays like a TV movie with a patina of production values.

Still, those first films remain great.

John Carpenter season on FilmFour (see listings for details)

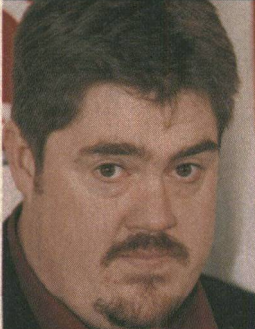

Above, left to right: the fantasy-action favourite Escape from New York; They Live, a caustic satire on the power of advertising; the seminal stalk-and-slash classic Halloween; out-of-this-world romance in Starman; a suspenseful siege scenario in Assault on Precinct 13; the horror compendium Body Bags; and a gruesome moment from the atmospheric Prince of Darkness

PHIL JUPITUS

What's your favourite movie? Midnight Run. Robert De Niro is surprisingly good in comedy. He has a lightness of touch. Who's your favourite actor? Johnny Depp. I think he's a genius. He's got such range. What's your first movie memory? I saw The Jungle Book at Barking Odeon when it opened. I always remember whenever I went to see a film there was always a kind of sadness when it came to an end because you knew that you would not see that film for at least another five years – until it came on the telly. What's the scariest moment you've seen on film? The 'Funny how?' scene [with Joe Pesci] in GoodFellas. What's your favourite movie scene? At the moment it's from The Matrix, the bit where Keanu Reeves goes in to see Laurence Fishburne and he says, 'We need guns. Lots of guns.' And then this five-mile long rack of machine guns spins past him.

MANCHESTER UNITED V LIVERPOOL
SKY SPORTS 1 SATURDAY 4TH 11.00AM - LIVE

Thin red line

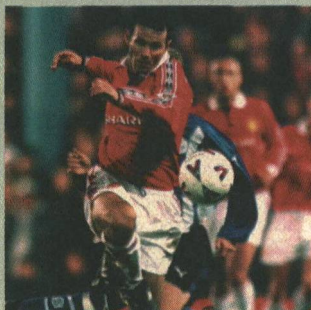

Nick Callow previews an epic struggle

THE TEAM of the Nineties entertain the club they succeeded to England's football throne for a match which is set to have a major bearing on the first Premier League's title race of the new century.

Whether you are an experienced player in these confrontations or, like United assistant manager Steve McClaren, a relatively new boy, there is no escaping the magnitude of the fixture.

'I am relishing it,' McClaren said. 'It's a massive game for both clubs. Liverpool will be full of confidence and as we've been going well also, it should be a cracking game.'

McClaren has now established himself as one of the game's leading coaches having left Derby County last season to succeed Brian Kidd at United. The early morning kick-off could favour the team which starts quickest this time around, but McClaren is not concerned and said: 'We're expecting a very tough game, but the players [like Ryan Giggs, pictured] are used to starting at various stages and times of the week nowadays, so the kick-off time shouldn't affect either team too much.' McClaren's main fear is the renewed strength of Liverpool under Gérard Houllier this season. He added: 'Mr Houllier made quite a few changes from last season to make Liverpool contenders. The rebuilding process is always a slow one, but just recently they've hit quite a rich vein of form and when Liverpool find that, they are very dangerous opponents.' Now we will find out whether they have improved enough to threaten United's quest to retain their Premier League title. Either way, the interest in this game will spread far beyond Manchester and Merseyside.

MANCHESTER CITY V CHARLTON ATHLETIC
SKY SPORTS 3 SUNDAY 19TH 12NOON - LIVE

Battle Royle

Graham Oliver speaks to Charlton's John Robinson

CHARLTON will be in determined mood for their clash against promotion rivals Manchester City and will look to redress the balance after City secured a flattering 1-0 victory at the Valley in November. Charlton's last Sky fixture was a 2-1 win at Huddersfield in December - a game that was driven by the spirited performance of veteran Addick John Robinson (pictured) who set up Andy Hunt's opener before getting on the score sheet himself with a 35-yard smash that's a sure contender for goal of the season. It's certainly one that Robinson will cherish: 'Nine times out of ten they end up in row Z!' he laughed. 'But that was a bit special. It just happens with games like that, where everything seems to go right.' Those sorts of games didn't come along often enough for Charlton during their one-season sojourn in the Premier League. 'In the Premiership I might have had a touch then passed it to someone. Because you're more in the limelight there, you're more afraid to make a mistake. It's stupid really, because at the end of the day if you don't shoot, you don't score.' But what of Joe Royle's men? City's win at the Valley belied Charlton's dominance. 'I think they know they were outplayed,' Robinson says. 'But this isn't a grudge match, we just look at it as another three points. 'We go to Walsall this month and they're going to fight for their lives. There's no point going to City and winning if you go to Walsall and lose - it's still three points. 'But we go out and attack teams and on our day we should beat any team - we're not scared of anyone.'

Michael is the Mann on FilmFour

This week FilmFour pays tribute to the designer stylings of director Michael Mann with a retrospective of his work, including the 1995 thriller Heat. This slick crime epic, which marks the electrifying first on-screen meeting of Al Pacino and Robert De Niro, is virtually a scene-for-scene remake of Mann's recently exhumed 1989 TV movie LA Takedown. But while there was little to savour in the rough-hewn original (which is airing immediately before Heat), this elegiac overhaul offers fresh rewards with each viewing. Pacino brings a combustible quality to the part of Vincent Hanna (above), an LAPD detective whose refusal to share his harrowing on-the-job experiences with his third wife has all but destroyed their marriage. De Niro, meanwhile, injects an affecting melancholy into his disciplined master thief Neil McCauley, being hunted by Hanna after he and his gang pull off a security van heist that leaves three guards dead. An uneasy respect develops between the fastidious cop and his equally meticulous adversary, paving the way for the celebrated cafe scene – the camera lingering in awe-struck alternate close-ups on the stars, as if it fears missing a single brilliantly observed reaction – where they call a tense, temporary truce over coffee.

FilmFour Thursday 2nd 10.00pm

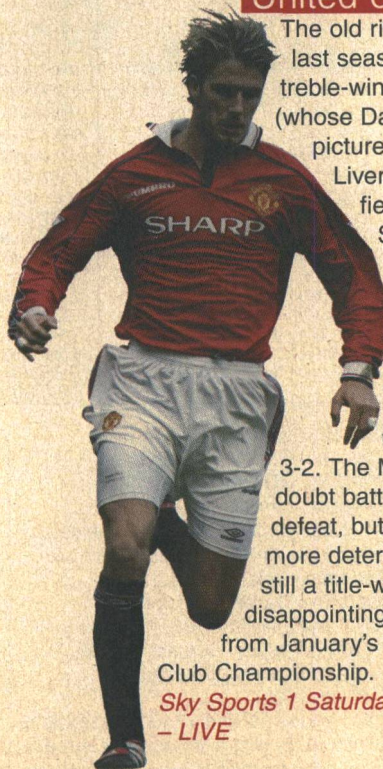

Bard influence

On Sunday The History Channel celebrates the life and works of the greatest dramatist in the English language in a Biography documentary. William Shakespeare's enduring works continue to be as popular in the new Millennium as they were when first staged in the late-16th and early-17th centuries. Indeed, the recent cinematic successes of William Shakespeare's Romeo + Juliet and the rousing, fancifully imagined Shakespeare in Love have inspired even more interest in the Bard. But despite his continuing influence and popularity, very little is known about Shakespeare's life – a problem that this programme hopes to redress.

The History Channel Sunday 5th 2.00pm

United or not?

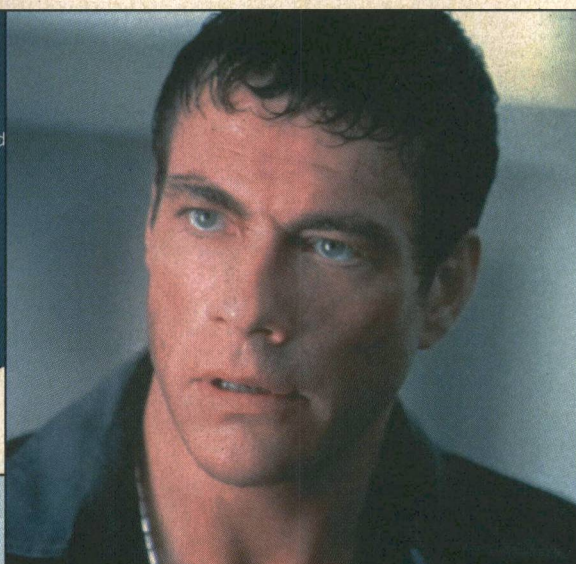

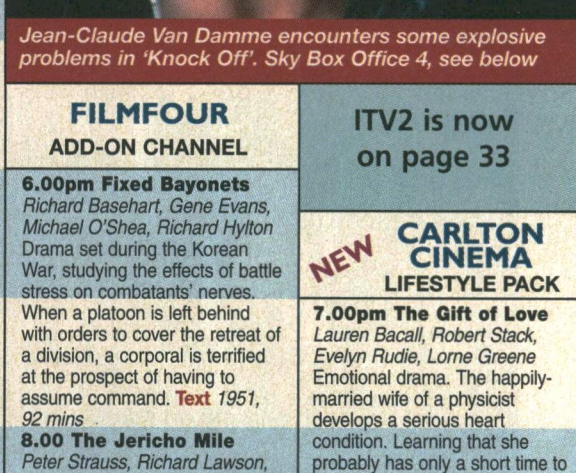

The old rivalry between last season's all-conquering treble-winners Manchester United (whose David Beckham is pictured) and title hopefuls Liverpool always results in fiercely contested clashes.

September's fixture at Anfield proved a vintage encounter between the two teams, with Sir Alex Ferguson's side going home with all three points after winning

3-2. The Merseysiders will no doubt battle bravely to avenge that defeat, but United seem even more determined to prove they are still a title-winning team after their disappointing early departure from January's World

Club Championship.

City of Hope Carlton Cinema 11.00pm Indie cinema auteur John Sayles displays a compassionate understanding of the many people who pass through this brilliantly observed slice-of-city-life. The pass-the-parcel narrative allows the film to unfold a number of stories involving several sets of characters.	The Royle Family UK Gold 9.40pm Who'd have thought that a sitcom about an unlovely Mancunian family of couch potatoes watching TV and bickering would prove such a hit? LPGA GOLF: AUSTRALIAN LADIES' MASTERS SKY SPORTS 2 2.00PM, SKY SPORTS 3 8.00PM by Ross Biddiscombe
 It's not often that the ladies' pro golf tour leaves America, but it's time to head down under for the Australian Masters at the Royal Pines Resort course on Queensland's Gold Coast. Home favourite Karrie Webb (pictured, left) won this title by an amazing 10 strokes last year - to add to her success in 1998 - and although the likes of Annika Sorenstam of Sweden (pictured, right) won't give up without a fight, Webb starts as favourite to achieve a hat trick of wins in this tournament.

MARCH BIRTHDAYS

17th Kurt Russell 19th Bruce Willis
25th Elton John 28th Michael Parkinson

Sensational ★★★ Stimulating ★★ Satisfactory ★

Aries

21 March-20 April ★★
DON'T be too quick to condemn others or apologies may be in order later. With Mars moving through your sign, some of your words or actions are likely to be impulsive and you'll hurtle headlong into trouble without even trying.

Libra

24 September-23 October ★★★
THIS month marks a turning point, as one chapter in your life closes and another opens. Romantically, you'll be at the centre of someone's universe and will feel adored. In a more general sense, your horizons are likely to expand.

Taurus

21 April-21 May ★★
THE year may have started out in a frenzied rush, but you'll sail through smoother waters this month. Someone who once turned their back on you may have a change of heart, or you'll see a sad situation in a whole new light.

Scorpio

24 October-22 November ★★
IT'S sometimes difficult for you to admit defeat, but you're also astute enough to know when you're flogging a dead horse. This month many of you will put a past situation behind you and accept that it's time to move on.

Gemini

22 May-21 June ★★
THE scene is set for a showdown with someone, but be careful to present your side of the argument tactfully. At best this is a month when you'll make your own needs clear. At worst, higher expectations may be placed on you.

Sagittarius

23 November-22 December ★
THERE may be a cosmic backlash to your recent vengeful behaviour, but you'll take your punishment in good spirit. It's always difficult for others to stay mad at you, especially when you show genuine shame and remorse.

Cancer

22 June-23 July ★★★
NEVER one to pass up an opportunity, you'll relish new challenges in the weeks ahead. Either your emotional life will be enriched by deeper bonds of love, or you'll be better off financially due to surprising developments.

Capricorn

23 December-20 January ★★★
BRILLIANT stars suggest everything will come together after months of planning or indecision. People from afar may figure strongly in your life, or you'll steam ahead with a project that's been very dear to your heart.

Leo

24 July-23 August ★★
YOUR affectionate advances may have been spurned in the past, but love lurks in the background this month. Usually your sign swears that once bitten twice shy, but with Mars in your mid-heaven you'll be brave enough to try again.

Aquarius

21 January-19 February ★★
IF a relationship has stood the test of time, you can expect it to flourish further this month. Yours is a loyal sign, but sometimes you distance yourself emotionally from loved ones. All that will change with a gentle nudge from Venus.

Virgo

24 August-23 September ★★
MERCURY in your marriage house encourages dialogue and feeds your desires. And while there may be some petty jealousy or rivalry between you and your partner, by month's end the sparkle will be back in a lacklustre relationship.

Pisces

20 February-20 March ★★★
YOUR annual new Moon ends speculation and clarifies the next step on your life journey. After months of marking time, you'll be formulating plans with someone you love and looking forward to a complete change of scene.

death. Crude toilet humour collides with acidic comments on consumerism.

LIVE FA PREMIER LEAGUE: MANCHESTER UNITED V LIVERPOOL SKY SPORTS 1 11.00AM

This fixture used to be the big one in English football, but Manchester United have been beating Liverpool too many times and too easily in recent years for this Old Trafford match to be anything more than another slim chance for the Merseysiders to reclaim former glories. No doubt United's Jaap Stam (pictured, left) will try and prevail against the likes of Vladimir Smicer and Titi Camara (pictured, right) to help ensure a probable home win - Liverpool fans would definitely disagree!

Giving the underdog a fat chance

FilmFour has hit peak fitness with its season of sports-themed movies. On Wednesday 8th the channel screens director Martin Scorsese's violent, monochrome Valentine to pugilism, Raging Bull, which earned Robert De Niro an Oscar for his penetrating, warts-and-all portrayal of middleweight champ Jake La Motta. This week, however, boxing is represented by Fat City, John Huston's steadfastly unsentimental celebration of the underdog, which focuses on the sad and seedy side of the sport inhabited by the has-beens and the never-will-bes. A sombre desperation is sewn through this tale of two down-at-heel souls, which was adapted by Leonard Gardner from his own novel. Stacey Keach (pictured) gives a career-best performance as a boozy, washed-up fighter, while Jeff Bridges is also excellent as his young protégé. Huston, probably better known for such lavishly mounted cinematic spectacles as The African Queen and The Man Who Would Be King, hits a wide range of truthful emotional notes and demonstrates a commendable compassion for the outcast in this poignant, character-driven drama.

Buffy's got real bite

Consistently inventive scripts and excellent cross-over stories with its spin-off show Angel prove there's still plenty of bite in Buffy the Vampire Slayer. In this Friday's urgently paced new episode, Doomed, demons aim to unleash an apocalypse on Earth.

GIVE US A BLUE'S CLUE

PHOTOS: JUSTINE BOHAN, NICKELODEON

Cable Guide went on set with the crew to find out how Blue's Clues is made ...

LIKE Nickelodeon's very own pied piper, Kevin Duala attracts kids wherever he goes. Kevin and his puppy, Blue, are household names, with Blue's Clues teaching kids how things work around the home.

Whenever Kevin finds himself in the company of youngsters, whether in his trademark stripy green top and beige trousers or not, he is instantly swamped with attention. 'The kids just look at me, stare and freeze,' he says. Even his three-year-old daughter, Ella, says goodbye to 'Kevin' in the morning. 'She doesn't call me Daddy,' he exclaims. 'It's Kevin!'

Blue's Clues hails from America but the director and producer of the UK version, John Rowe, has seen the show flourish here over the last three years.

With a mixture of live action and animation, Kevin is filmed in front of an entirely blue set on which the background animation (from America) is then superimposed.

'We build up our soundtrack before filming,' explains John. 'Kevin can then hear the characters, music and sound effects through his earpiece.' The process is lengthy. It takes six months to make 10 episodes of Blue's Clues, with one 20-minute episode taking three days to film.

Viewers are invited to help Kevin search for Blue's three clues, and when Kevin finds each clue he draws it in his notebook, then he sits in his Thinking Chair to discover what Blue wants to do.

Various personalities regularly appear to take part in the problem solving. There's Mr Salt and Mrs Pepper and their baby, Paprika, Post Box, Slippery Soap and Tickety-tock. All the characters, except Blue, are voiced by Kara Tritton, who's provided an amazing 100 different voices for the series so far.

Oh, and before you ask, yes, Kevin does have clean shirts. 'People shout across the street, "Can you change that shirt, Kevin?"' he laughs. 'I have four stripy shirts and they do get washed!' Blue's Clues, Nickelodeon, weekdays 12.30pm

John Rowe and Kevin run through the script on set

WIN! KEVIN AT YOUR BIRTHDAY PARTY

This is your chance to enjoy a birthday party to remember. What could be more exciting than sharing your celebrations with none other than Kevin from Nickelodeon's Blue's Clues? Just imagine the look on your friends' faces!

The winner of this special competition can welcome Kevin into their home to join in the fun and games at their next birthday party. Not only that but the winner will get a Nickelodeon goody bag, including a Blue puppy. Five runners-up will also win a Blue puppy.

To be in with a chance of winning, just answer this question:

What is Kevin's red chair called?

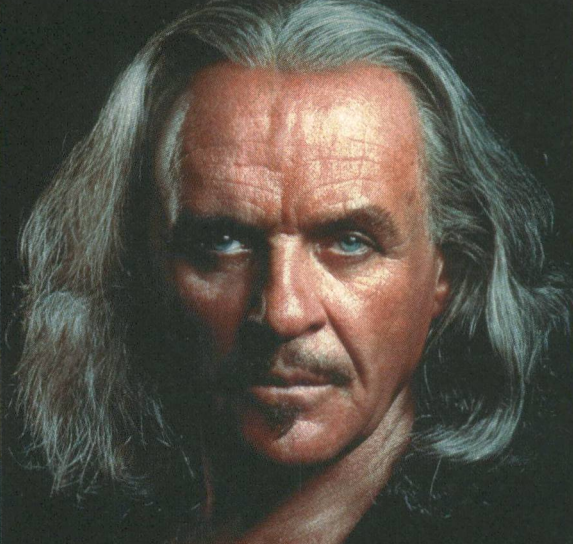

- A) The Blinking Chair
- B) The Winking Chair
- C) The Thinking Chair

Send your answer on a postcard with your name, address and date of birth to Cable Guide/Blue's Clues competition,

PO BOX 2176,
London W1A 5TW.
Closing date is 31
March 2000. Full competition rules are on page 216.

The dinosaurs are back!

As UK Horizons goes dinosaur crazy for a week, Cable Guide speaks to Jez Gibson Harris, who has hands-on experience of Walking with Dinosaurs

TRAVELLING around the world filming for a multi-million pound production may sound thrilling. But Jez Gibson Harris, an animatronics expert who worked on the BBC's Walking with Dinosaurs, also found the whole experience a distinct challenge.

The acclaimed six-part series, narrated by Kenneth Branagh, brings to life the diverse prehistoric world of the dinosaurs using a combination of scientific know-how, computer animation and animatronics.

was a challenge,' explains Jez. 'There were no heavy computerised motors inside as we had to carry these things up mountains and into dense forests, and it was usually pouring with rain.'

Locations, which included Chile, the Bahamas and New Caledonia, had to reflect the warm, grassless environment the dinosaurs inhabited 60 million years ago. About a month was spent at each location gaining landscape shots and filming the close-ups of the models in action. Back in the studio, lasers scanned the animatronic models into the computer, enabling the dinosaurs to be recreated by animation.

The spectacularly realistic scenes produced would not have been possible without the animatronic expertise. But Jez is unsure how much longer the art can survive. 'My job is fascinating, but computer graphics are getting better all the time. I think we will still be around in five years, but CG is the big new thing.'

As the man behind the workings of Return of the Jedi's Jabba the Hutt, Jez is used to creating memorable creatures on film. But what makes Walking with Dinosaurs so ground-breaking? 'The ability to get real film quality special effects like that on TV, especially for a science-based programme,' says Jez. 'And to make the science so interesting and realistic.'

And with another series of Walking with Dinosaurs in the pipeline, Jez and the team are sure to be kept busy recreating 'the lost world' once again.

● Dinosaurs Week, UK Horizons, starts Sunday 19th, see listings for times

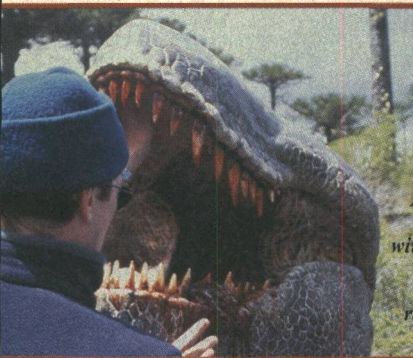

WEB CHECK!

Visit www.bbc.co.uk/dinosaurs for the official low-down on the series

at Crawley Creatures and Associates were responsible for providing more than 80 animatronic models for the series. This involved making rubber feet, animatronic heads and large sections of skin, such as that for a Diplodocus replica that measured three metres square. Creating the reproductions did present a number of difficulties though.

'Building it all relatively light-weight, but easy to maintain and indestructible

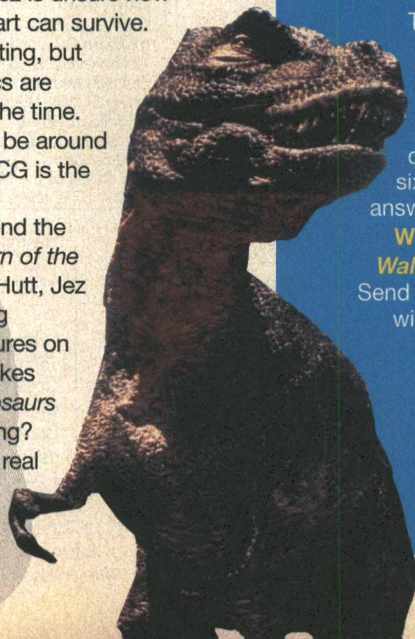

WIN!
1 of 100 dinos

To celebrate Walking with Dinosaurs coming to UK Horizons we have an incredible 100 dinosaurs up for grabs! To be in with a chance of winning one of the six dinos pictured above, just answer this question correctly:

One Fine Day
Sky Premier 10.00am, 6.00pm

Charlton's Royle appointment

Charlton have coped with the disappointment of relegation from the Premiership after their one-season sojourn with commendable dignity. They have demonstrated their determination to bounce straight back with a string of convincing wins that saw them climb to the summit of Division One in January. This Sunday, the Addicks (whose Greg Shields is pictured, near right, fending off Crewe's Colin Cramb) descend on Maine Road for what should prove to be a fiercely contested clash against fellow promotion favourites Manchester City. The plucky south Londoners will be looking to redress the balance after Joe Royle's side secured a flattering 1-0 victory at the Valley in November. Since then, Charlton have found formidable away form and have notched up confident wins on their visits to such tough teams as Grimsby, Huddersfield, Stockport, Wolves and, in the FA Cup, Premiership side Coventry. Addicks winger and Welsh international John Robinson told Cable Guide: 'We're more suited to play away. Teams come to the Valley and put eight or nine men behind the ball, which is hard to break down. Whereas, away from home, the onus is on the other team to get forward. Then we soak up a bit of pressure and make the break – that's our game. 'We go out and attack teams in this division, and, on our day, we should beat anyone. When you look at the squad now, there's real strength in depth and it's looking good.'

Sky Sports 3 Sunday 19th 12noon – LIVE

Jimmy Hollywood

This week, in a Biography special, The History Channel celebrates one of cinema's most adored actors. James Stewart captured the hearts of moviegoers with his portrayal of the quintessential American everyman in It's a Wonderful Life. But he got to indulge his darker side as the obsessive hero in Vertigo, and as the nifty bounty hunter in The Naked Spur.

The History Channel Monday 20th 8.00pm

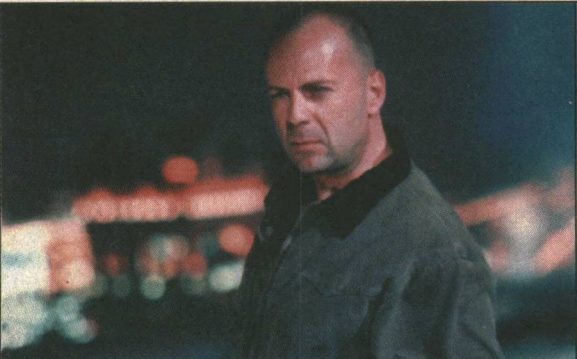

A suspense-thriller with Willis power

While some plot points of the Bruce Willis vehicle Mercury Rising occasionally stretch credibility to snapping point, it is salvaged by director Harold Becker's deftness at conjuring up unbearable suspense. The action sequences are mounted with efficiency and the film is enriched by the neatly observed performances of the principals. Willis is ideally cast as the troubled FBI agent protecting an autistic boy (played with affecting subtlety by Miko Hughes), who has been marked for death because of his incredible code-cracking capabilities. Alec Baldwin clocks in to play the suavely evil villain.

LIVE MOTOR RACING: NASCAR BUSCH - DARLINGTON SKY SPORTS 2 6.00PM

We're off to where the motor racing is at its highest octave - the NASCAR Busch series. The circuit for this race is one of the most respected in American motorsport - South Carolina's Darlington Raceway. The man who all the experts consider the favourite is Jeff Green (pictured) and he aims to halt the dynamic progress of Dale Earnhardt Jr. However, last year's honours went to another great rival speedster, Jeff Burton, who will not relinquish his title easily.

BOWIE GETS THE HUNGER

David Bowie and Tony Scott have joined forces to bring you this striking show. Words: Patrick Holm

THERE aren't many TV series in which the documentary about its creation finishes with the narrator electrocuting himself in an electric chair within a deserted prison. But there aren't many TV series quite like The Hunger, which returns to Sci-Fi on Friday 10th (9.30pm) for a second series. But what could you expect from a creative team that includes David Bowie, a phenomenon both as constantly self-reinventing pop icon and as fantasy actor, Ridley Scott, whose visions of the future in Alien and Blade Runner have influenced most of SF film and TV since their release, and his brother Tony, who created a mood of paranoia with his most recent film, Will Smith's Enemy of the State? For those who haven't caught up with The Hunger's blend of MTV video visuals and music, violence, sex and darkness – the Canadian-produced show is an anthology series, mostly adapting short stories that contain some element of hunger in them. It might be for power, life, money, blood or sex. Whatever it is, as David Bowie's narrator explains at the end of the opening episode,

'The hunger will take over, and you will pay everything you have to satisfy it. Everything – and more.' In the first tale, Bowie plays Julian Priest, who creates ultimate performance art – and pays the ultimate price. Released from his mortal bounds, he becomes the narrator, setting the scene for each episode and then drawing a dark moral from the tale. 'Beauty intermingles with horror,' he points out, as we meet serial killers, a killer's ghost (played by Dr Who's most recent nemesis, Eric Roberts), and a website that promises its surfer the world. There's a strong sexual element to many of the episodes, and many contain extreme swearing, but Tony Scott, who directed the first episode which set the visual tone for the series, claims that the stories are 'intelligent dramas, each handled with flair and integrity, which fall between rock 'n' roll and serious drama'. Any show that tries to present the world through the eyes of someone going mad is certainly experimental, and it is worth watching to see if it's to your taste.

TIME MACHINE

LAND OF THE GIANTS

Time Span: 1968-1970 (US); 1968-1972 (UK)

Plot: In the far future, the spaceship Spindrift enters a white cloud and finds itself in a land where everything is a dozen times larger than it is on Earth. Battling against those who want to put them on display as weird museum exhibits – as well as those who have other ideas of how to use miniature people – the crew must find a way to repair their damaged ship and return home.

Most popular character: Alexander Fitzhugh (Kurt Kasznar): a gambler and rogue who managed to get the 'little people' into a lot of the scrapes that hero Captain Steve Burton (Gary Conway) would have to sort out!

Most memorable episode: Pay the Piper – with Lost in Space's Jonathan Harris (Dr Smith) guest starring as a giant Pied Piper.

Why did it finish? It was very expensive and producer Irwin Allen had his eyes set on the big screen. Cue The Poseidon Adventure ...

Vicki Butler-Henderson
GIRL RACER

IT'S a good thing to set yourself goals in life sometimes, and it's a fantastic feeling when you achieve them, don't you agree? Well, I set myself a challenge a few years ago (I know, it takes me a while to get the ball rolling) but I have now fulfilled one ambition, and I have to say I'm as pleased as a very pleased thing. You see, I've just passed my motorbike test.

I've always thought that bikes were

Hot wheels

Vicki Butler-Henderson's on the road again, but this time the adrenalin queen is donning sober 'L' plates and a fluorescent top rather sexy things – and I don't mean big old Harley Davidsons – I'm talking sports bikes, and the bigger the rear tyre the better. I've been on the back of a few and was just amazed at the way they can accelerate. They are phenomenal. So, being an adrenalin junky, I knew I had to taste that power and speed first hand. Anyway, I'm not a massive fan of not being in control of a vehicle, whatever it may be.

And so the plot was hatched for me to grapple with the handlebars and see if I really enjoyed it. I did, and I do!

I had a five-day intensive training course at Motorcycle City in Tamworth, near Birmingham, and started off on a 125cc – yes, complete with 'L' plates and a very attractive fluorescent top.

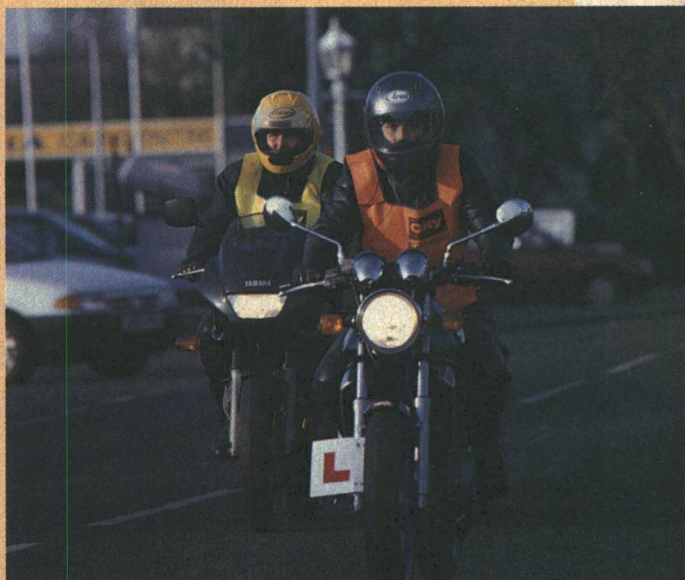

It scared me a bit to start with because the feeling was so new, but just a few hours later

I was let loose on public roads with my instructor following (closely). The next few days on the little buzz-box saw me complete

U-turns, which were a bit wobbly to begin with, at very low speeds, and of course the good old emergency stop.

On the fourth day I moved up to a Suzuki GS500 and thought I was in heaven. The smallest twist of the throttle saw me rocketing up a road – and I was hooked. This is what it's all about – an open road and an enjoyable amount of power.

Back in town, it didn't help my nerves (not one bit) that I had the Top Gear GTi crew following my progress. I have to admit I banned them from filming me actually doing my test. As I rode out of the Test Centre at Lichfield – with the examiner following on his bike – I prayed. Rather a lot, actually. In true

'learner-fashion' I was nodding my head as I checked my mirrors, and looked over my shoulder so many times that I could give the original Nodding Dog a run for his money. I did the best slow-speed U-turn of my small biking career but goofed badly as we rode back into the test centre by putting my foot down like a true 'amateur' as we turned into the car park.

The examiner asked me a couple of biking questions and then said those immortal words: 'I'm pleased to say that you have passed.' Upon which I burst into tears and made him say them again! Thankfully, it's all captured on film so I can revel in my delight!

Here are some useful numbers to make it easier to organise your test.

Australians seem to win just about everything in sports these days and one of their folk, Karrie Webb (pictured), has been dominating the women's golf circuit recently. Tonight, Webb will star in the highlights of the LPGA action from last week's $127,500 Standard Register PING tournament where she defends one of the six Tour titles she won in 1999. Other likely contenders include Britain's Laura Davies and the perennially successful Annika Sorenstam of Sweden.

LIVE FORD GOLF USA: PLAYERS' CHAMPIONSHIP SKY SPORTS 2 4.30PM

It was quite a weekend for the Duval family during the Players' Championship last year. Son David (pictured, left) continued his magnificent early season form to win the tournament – beating Scott Gump (pictured, right) – while his father Bob was winning a Seniors event on the same day. It was the first father-and-son double in golf history. A footnote for the $5m event in 1999 was the disqualification of Nick Faldo. This year's question is: can anyone stop Tiger Woods?

An impressive sight

Steven Soderbergh is a director who delights in disrupting his audiences' expectations. Since winning the Cannes Palme d'Or for his 1989 debut, the assured conversation piece sex, lies and videotape, Soderbergh has made few concessions to the mainstream. Indeed, he discarded the rules of cinema altogether to make his most obscure project yet – the playfully impenetrable Schizopolis. After the anarchic extremes of that screwball curio, Soderbergh seemed like the last director you'd expect to bring a novel by hip crime writer Elmore Leonard to the screen. But in Out of Sight he proves that he's as comfortable with funky pulp thrillers as he is with arthouse fare. In the film, Fate conspires to throw together sassy Deputy Federal Marshall Jennifer Lopez and affable escaped convict George Clooney.

Billy flyer

Glasgow Rangers' star Billy Dodds may have only been with the club for a short time but he has already made an impact in the Old Firm clashes. Dodds was signed for £1.3m from Dundee United last December and on his derby debut that same month at Celtic Park, the Scottish international made a dream start when he cancelled out Mark Viduka's opening goal to make it 1-1. The Gers will again look to the likes of Dodds for inspiration when the teams meet for the final time in the league this season on Sunday in front of a packed house of 50,000 at Ibrox.

Cashing in

It is testament to the incredible versatility of legendary, Grammy award-laden singer-songwriter Johnny Cash (who is the subject of a History Channel documentary) that he appeals to fans of varied age groups and musical tastes. There was a genuine feeling of danger about Cash when he cut his early sides in the Fifties; his working-class background, craggy features and gravelly delivery of such tough tunes as Folsom Prison Blues gave him real credibility as a rock 'n' roll hero. There were pop hits, too, including the classics I Walk the Line and Ring of Fire (recently used to atmospheric effect in the Oliver Stone film U-Turn), but these days Cash probably commands the greatest respect on the country and western circuit.

This game is the last of their four annual league clashes and Rangers' form cannot wobble or Celtic will gobble them up. The Gers are stacked full of foreign players, yet it is their Scottish stars such as Billy Dodds (pictured in action against Celtic's Jackie McNamara), who can provide the extra passion for today's clash at Ibrox. Dodds scored on his derby debut last December and would love to repeat that today. 	 The poor Scotland football team is reduced to playing friendlies this summer, as qualifiers for the Euro 2000 finals line-up to test their competitive skills against the also-rans. Never mind, bravehearts like Billy Dodds (pictured, left) and company will value playing the World Cup winners France tonight who boast players such as Marcel Desailly (pictured, right) and Thierry Henry. It's just the kind of game Scotland will win to make them feel even worse about non-qualification. 				10.00pm Freeview 10.06 Amy Lyn Baxter 11.15 Passion Cove 12midnight Freeview 12.10am Wanna Be A Porn Star? 12.40 Naughty Nostalgia 1.05 Premier Strip 1.15 FILM: Dominant Jean 2.25 Suburban Sex Secrets 2.50-4.00am: FILM: Heist	12midnight The Ten Minute Preview 12.10am FILM: Babes Illustrated 6 1.00 The Five Minute Freeview 1.05 FILM continues 1.20 FILM: Paid to Play 2.30 FILM: Gold Diggers 3.40-4.00am Lu Lu Divine

He's her "tubby little cubby all stuffed with fluff..." "You Need a Hug Pooh"

The first porcelain Winnie The Pooh doll, available exclusively through The Ashton-Drake Galleries

What little bear could be easier to love than Winnie the Pooh? In this little girl's mind, there's no bear anywhere that even comes close. He is her "tubby little cubby all stuffed with fluff", her favourite bear of all. And she loves him so very much, she wants to cuddle him wherever she goes.

"You Need a Hug Pooh" captures the special feeling this sweet child has for Winnie The Pooh, who is such a source of comfort and fun for children of all ages... adults too. She's the first porcelain doll to celebrate him in all his chubby lovable glory.

Designed by renowned doll artist Cindy McClure, this loving little girl is carefully crafted in hand-painted porcelain. She has deep blue, hand-set eyes and soft blonde hair surrounding her baby face, with its gentle expression of love for Winnie The Pooh. She wears a hooded sleepsuit of softest brushed fleece, designed to mimic Winnie The Pooh's distinctive yellow coat, as well as his little red shirt with his name embroidered on the front. Holding her own little Winnie The Pooh on her lap, she hugs him tenderly.

There's a £50 prize for the best letter!

THE WINNING WEST WING

BRILLIANT ensemble acting and terrific one-liners, The West Wing (Mondays, Sky One) has made politics – even American politics – completely unmissable. Funny and intelligent, and boasting the brilliant skill of the vastly underrated Martin Sheen, this is a sure-fire winner. The only quibble is a lacklustre 'star' in Rob Lowe, who's missing the energy the rest of the cast exhibit. Still, he's easy on the eye.

B Scully, Birkenhead

● Congratulations! Your letter has won this month's £50 prize.

THANK YOU, SKY SPORTS!

A HUGE thank you to Sky Sports for finally deciding to broadcast WWF Smackdown. Now the regular WWF viewers are not missing any of the action from the US.

FRIENDS JUST GETS BETTER

THE MAKERS of Friends as ever kept us on tenterhooks awaiting the new series and the dramatic culmination of the ongoing Ross and Rachel saga. It was definitely worth the wait! Who'd have thought that the on/off couple would succumb to a Las Vegas wedding ceremony and actually get married! Equally intriguing was the 'will they, won't they?' of Chandler and Monica, for whom good sense won through in the end, the unfortunate change of surname surely good enough reason in itself – Monica Bing? Well, it has a certain ring to it. As always, there is no knowing what's to follow. However, Access All Areas: Friends on Sky One provided a rare and welcome glimpse inside the world of Friends, demonstrating exactly what goes into making it one of the most successful TV series of all time.

S Joshi, e-mail

● Sky One intends to repeat Access All Areas: Friends later in the year.

The 'underrated' Martin Sheen in The West Wing

SETTING THE RECORD STRAIGHT

THANK YOU, VH1, for the Behind the Music series, in particular for the Milli Vanilli documentary (16 January). All I knew when I was young was that they were a disgrace to the music industry. But VH1 set the record straight. The story of Rob and Fab was brilliantly presented and Rob, who died in 1998, will always be remembered.

PLEASE CAST THE ASIANET WIDER

ASIANET is one of the few non-premier channels to show fast-and-furious action films. Why don't they broaden their appeal by adding subtitles for non-Asian speakers like myself? Any extra cost would be made up by the advertisers drawn in by the extra viewers. Asian films are popular in many countries, let's add the UK to them.

Steve Brookes, e-mail

● Asianet responds: 'Unfortunately, very few programmes and movies are supplied to us with subtitles. Asianet's now tending to buy subtitled programmes where available, although these are still scarce. Asianet is moving towards having most programmes subtitled for the benefit of both non-Asian-speaking and non-hearing viewers.'

FROM CONS TO CONSTABLES

IT IS AMAZING the effect Sunhill Police Station has on criminals. Comparing current episodes of The Bill with the repeats on UK Gold, it seems some people arrested in old episodes have reformed and become police officers!

Sharon Dobson, Lancs

● Karl Collins played three baddies before becoming DC Danny Glaze!

DEMON SLAYERS: MIXED RESPONSE

ANGST-RIDDEN vampire now bent on doing good to atone for evil past was pretty well done by Forever Knight. So, forgive me for viewing Angel (Sky One) with scepticism – the word rip-off comes to mind. Fortunately, thanks to a quirky half-demon sidekick and an ample injection of humour, Angel is different enough to compare favourably with its predecessor. Doyle's phoney Irish accent is atrocious, though! Nevertheless, I admit I'm hooked already. Now we just need Buffy to stop mooching around like a lovesick calf and get back to business pronto and we'll have two hours of prime viewing on Friday nights. The opening episodes of the latest season of Buffy were below par.

Linda McGrath, e-mail

HEAD AND SHOULDERS ABOVE THE REST

C'MON then, own up. Who let Hannibal Lecter loose on Photoshop? Cable Guide's February front cover (below) depicted 'soft centres' of a rather 'icky' nature – severed heads in a box of Thorntons Finest. It looks like Jeffrey Dahmer has taken up being the Milk Tray Man. Perhaps Discovery could devote a series to the cover's designer – psychological profiles, catalogue of past crimes. Maybe Peter West (Art Editor) is a big fan of Damien Hirst, in which case we can expect some real cutting-edge stuff on the front covers in future. I can't wait for the Easter edition. Possibly the 'chocolate cast' of Coronation Street left too long by the fireside, barely recognisable, but just enough for people to go 'eeeeewwww'.

Kris Green, e-mail

AIN'T NO PRETENDING

WILL the new series of The Pretender ever get shown on Sky One? It must be a good 18 months since the last transmission, and it is still top in America. Come on, Sky, let us fans have our programme back on for Sunday nights.

J Harrington, e-mail

● Sky One informs us they still have no plans at present to show The Pretender.

SCOOBY'S DOO LATE!

YOU'D better change the time of Scooby Doo, Cartoon Network, or you'll be in trouble! It's ridiculous that it's on at 7.30pm, it's just too late! Is it a grown-up movie or what?

Sam Gardner (6), e-mail

● Cartoon Network informs us Scooby Doo can also be seen at 7.00am. And tune in on Saturday 4th for a Scooby Doo Marathon.

THE ROSWELL HIGH LIFE

CONGRATULATIONS to Sky One for showing Roswell High. It's an excellent mixture of romance and comedy – I am totally glued to the TV. I can't wait for the rest of the series.

Nicky Gray, Norfolk
